

Natural Gas Cooperation in the Eastern Med

by GPF Staff - November 22, 2019

On July 25, in light of numerous recent natural gas discoveries in the Eastern Mediterranean, the energy ministers of Cyprus, Egypt, Greece, Israel, Italy, Jordan and the Palestinian Territories gathered to form a committee. This group, the Eastern Mediterranean Gas Forum (EMGF), is intended to promote respect for the rights of its members to their natural resources. The forum is an expression of the changing face of the region, in which political and military rivalries and animosities are overshadowed by economic interests, even as some regional states, including Lebanon, Syria and Turkey, have yet to join.

NATURAL GAS COOPERATION IN THE EASTERN MED

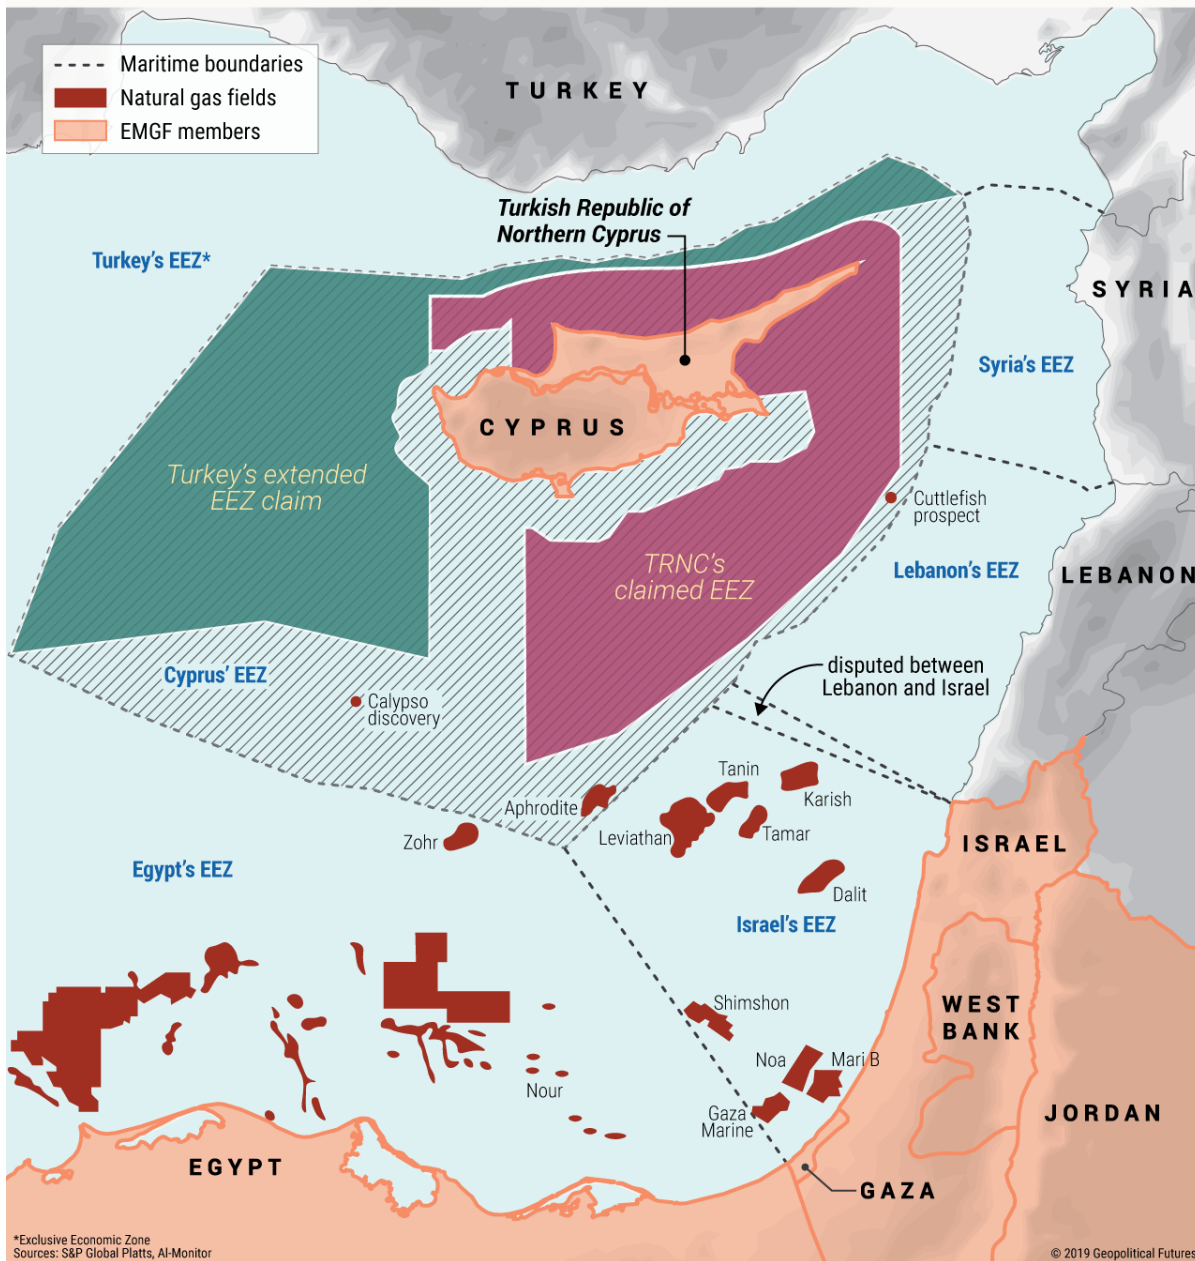

EMGF
 CYPRUS
 EGYPT
 GREECE
 ISRAEL
 ITALY
 JORDAN
 PALESTINIAN TERRITORIES

On July 25, in light of numerous recent natural gas discoveries in the Eastern Mediterranean, the energy ministers of Cyprus, Egypt, Greece, Israel, Italy, Jordan and the Palestinian Territories gathered to form a committee. This group, the Eastern Mediterranean Gas Forum (EMGF), is intended to promote respect for the rights of its members to their natural resources. The forum is an expression of the changing face of the region, in which political and military rivalries and animosities are overshadowed by economic interests, even as some regional states, including Lebanon, Syria and Turkey, have yet to join.

non-EMGF
 LEBANON
 SYRIA
 TURKEY

(click to enlarge)

Author: GPF Staff

Read more from this author on geopoliticalfutures.com